

School News

Tuesday, June 12, 2007 12:07 PM EDT

Ashford Park Elementary School in Brookhaven recently hosted “Sembler Appreciation Day” to thank the real estate development company for its donation of a brand-new computer lab. The gift of 28 computers and flat screen monitors along with software and SMART Boards, makes it possible for an entire class of students to participate at the same time in valuable hands-on classroom instruction. Not only are they mastering basic computer skills, students also are working on the skills they need to take their Georgia Criterion Reference Competency Test.

“We are tremendously grateful for Sembler’s generosity and community-mindedness,” said Toni Fallon, principal of Ashford Park Elementary. “Not only are we the only elementary school in DeKalb’s school system with a computer lab of this magnitude to benefit our current students, the lab is also an excellent recruiting tool to target new families that move in to the neighborhood and are looking at schools for their children.”