

C Lighting benefits the visually impaired

December 26, 2008

C Lighting owner Yaacov Golan held his annual holiday bash Dec. 11 at the store, located at 333 Buckhead Avenue, which benefited the Center for the Visually Impaired (CVI). Golan said he is "proud to continue the Israeli tradition of providing support to the visually impaired community, especially during Hanukkah, the season of light." From left: Golan is shown during the party, which was attended by more than 300, with CVI President Subie Green, Steven Buchwald, director of trade sales for C Lighting, and Frank Virgin, chair of the CVI Board of Trustees. CVI is Georgia's largest facility providing rehabilitation services for individuals of all ages who are blind or visually impaired.
