

7/12/2010 Front page:

Finnair's Future To Include Expansion Into North America

When Mika Vehviläinen joined Finnair as its president and CEO in February 2010, he immediately set out to formulate a new vision for the future of Finnair: 'Finnair's Vision 2020.' "Finnair's vision for 2020 is to be the number one airline in our home market, covering the Baltics and Scandinavia," notes Vehviläinen. "We want to be number one in terms of airline size, quality and financial health. I am optimistic that we are going to attain this goal through our long-term... more, page 6

AIRLINES & AIRPORTS

Finnair's Future To Include Expansion Into North America

When Mika Vehviläinen joined Finnair as its president and CEO in February 2010, he immediately set out to formulate a new vision for the future of Finnair: 'Finnair's Vision 2020.'

"Finnair's vision for 2020 is to be the number one airline in our home market, covering the Baltics and Scandinavia," notes Vehviläinen. "We want to be number one in terms of airline size, quality and financial health. I am optimistic that we are going to attain this goal through our long-term strategy that includes operational efficiency, reliability, innovation and distinctly personal service. Our success factors are quality, freshness and creativity - factors that make us the best."

"Finnair's other overarching goal for 2020 is to be the top choice for travelers between Europe and Asia, and possibly between North America and Asia. We are looking to create more North America routes, especially if these routes can be connected to our Asian network. Currently we code-share and connect in New York with our oneworld partner American Airlines to more than a dozen cities in North America, and are also discussing other forms of cooperation," continues Vehviläinen. "This could eventually lead to Finnair opening new routes between North America and Helsinki in partnership with American Airlines."

Michael Maass, Finnair's Sales Director for North America, adds, "Already, our business travelers to Europe, the Baltics, Russia or Asia realize that Finnair is a smart choice in terms of time and money saved; currently, business class fares from New York to Asia start at $3,199!"

Currently, Finnair's global route network includes more than 50 international destinations, and 700 more through its cooperation with oneworld alliance partners.

www.finnair.com