(Rewrites and adds detail and comment.)

Finnair Oyj (FIA1S.HE) Tuesday canceled more than a hundred flights due to a strike by flight attendants, a move it said likely would lead to an operating loss for the year, and signaled it was considering a restructuring that could include outsourcing some responsibilities.

In the face of the industrial action, Finnair said that it would be impossible to build a viable future for the company with the current structures and that it was considering changes. Those changes could include outsourcing some activities and moving some functions abroad.

Roughly 6,000 passengers were expected to ...
